

INTRODUCTION

It is a pleasure to report that considerable interest continues to be shown in the Newsletter with requests for earlier numbers continuing to be received from around the world. At the same time your Editor has not had time to write individually to many of you for contributions to the Newsletter, and so make an effort to send me items which you have not gotten around to sending to me. A greater number of contributions could be handled--new techniques, research notes, laboratory news, meetings, letters to the Editor, references to recent publications, etc. Send items to your Editor NOW for the next issue.
